5 Bar Flat Top

Quarley

5 bar Estate

Kimpton

The majestic sweep of the top rail highlights just one of the aspects that make a timbergate so attractive.

Abbotts

A welcoming and harmonious entrance can be effortlessly achieved by co-ordinating natural materials with quality workmanship.

Iroko

A close resemblance to teak in appearance and durability, therefore is perfect for situations in which humidity levels change, which is why it is a good choice for outdoors.

Iroko displays a very attractive appearance when oiled.

Oak

Modern technology has ousted oak from many traditional uses, replacing it with metals, concrete, softwoods or even plastics. None of these materials share its beauty of grain, and is still employed where appearance counts.

Fashions vary, but oak always returns to popularity on its proven worth. Oak is exceptionally durable outdoors, even without treatment, this is due to the tannins in the wood which makes it resistant to decay.

Accoya

The world's most stable wood, which has extremely low shrinking and swelling, as well as superb dimensional stability.

Accoya is a timber that has undergone a revolutionary chemical modification to create a durable class 1, dimensionally stable, non-toxic and sustainable real wood product. Ideal for painted gates and can be successfully stained to a colour of your choice.

Grateley

Bespoke Ironmongery

Our attention to detail is widely recognized by our clients and it doesn't stop with the gates! Customized colours and shaped ironmongery are the final touch to any gate to give it that distinguished classic appearance.
